FOREWORD

It gives me immense pleasure to present the catalogue on the Geographical Indications of the agri products under the purview of APEDA.

India is a country with diverse agro climatic conditions conducive for production of wide variety of agri products. With a broad base of agri production, there are several agri commodities having Geographical Indications (GI tags) in India. Geographical Indications (GI tags) convey a distinctiveness attributable to its origin in that defined geographical locality, region or country.

As on date, there are 417 registered Geographical Indications in India of which around 150 are agricultural and food products GI. More than 100 registered GI products fall under the category of APEDA scheduled products (Cereals, fresh fruits and vegetables, floriculture, processed products etc).

This catalogue is an attempt to provide details of the Geographical Indications of the APEDA scheduled products for reference of the concerned stakeholders compiled from information available on the GI Registry website (<https://ipindia.gov.in>).

While competing in the international market, the GI products will give a brand image to the Indian origin products and make it popular across the globe.

It is our endeavour to create a niche market for Indian GI agri-products, thereby establishing India as a brand, known for its legacy, quality, delicacies and varieties internationally.

(Dr. M Angamuthu)
